SUMMER WEIGHT SIZE CHART

Note: Print This Document

Do Not Place Hand on Monitor for fitting

Most people have a fair idea of their hand size from purchasing other gloves over the years. If you have an idea that you use an X large for instance, however you know that you have a large muscular hand, then go up a half size based on that experience. If you know that an x Large is usually a little big because you have a smaller hand structure, then go down 1/2 size.

If you order a glove and it isn't just right for you, simply return it in as new condition, and I will send the corrected size. I want happy customers out there and will work with you to make it right. Please try my gloves, I am sure you will be very happy with them from both a wear and performance stand point.

Here is a sizing chart, if it measures $5 \frac{1}{4}$ inches from A to B then the chart should get you very close. You must still use your judgement based on your experience and knowledge of your own hands. You can also call me if you like to discuss the sizing.

One last point, there is a $\frac{1}{2}$ size difference between the Summer Weight and Standard Weight Glove. So in most instances you should order the Standard weight $\frac{1}{2}$ size larger than the Summer weight that fits you, and visa versa, if you are wearing the Standard weight order $\frac{1}{2}$ size smaller when ordering the Summer Weight. Order Winter Weight a full size larger than what you would normally wear

Thanks for writing. Shoot Well and be Safe.
